Active Shooter Response Executive Summary - Staff Development

Statistics

- There doesn't seem to be an official definition for a "mass shooting" in the United States. However, according to the F.B.I., a mass shooting is four or more individuals being shot or killed in the same general time and location.
- The number of mass shootings around the country in 2018 continues to climb. According to data from the not-for-profit organization Gun Violence Archive, a total of 171 mass shooting incidents have occurred in 2018 as of July 10, 2018 including the recent school shooting in Santa Fe, Texas.
- According to the Washington post, 2018 has been deadlier for schoolchildren than deployed service members.
- Numerous organizations including the US Department of Homeland Security, the US Department of Education, the New York Police Department (NYPD) and the International Association of Chiefs of Police (IACP) agree that a one-option approach (i.e. lockdown) is not sufficient. Staff and Employees need to have multiple options at their disposal (Run, Hide, Fight, etc.).

Plan of Action Needed

The FBI says that the generally agreed upon definition of an active shooter situation is "an individual actively engaged in killing or attempting to kill people in a confined and populated area." "Unlike a defined crime, such as a murder or mass killing, the active aspect inherently implies that both law enforcement personnel AND citizens have the potential to affect the outcome of the event based upon their responses," the FBI said in a 2013 study of active shooter incidents.

Schools and Businesses must become pro-active, not reactive, in making staff and employees aware of key principles that will empower them to make life-saving decisions in the heat of the moment that will buy time and save lives.

Change Thinking - Change Behavior - Manage Risk

Preventing an active shooter situation is impossible. There is no demographic or profile that will predict where the next situation might occur. However, when lightning strikes, your employees must be able to respond with simple steps to keep themselves safe. It requires building a culture of people who have a mental awareness of their surroundings and clearly defined action steps. Properly training employees is a necessary component in empowering them to know what to do.

Common sense is not common knowledge. The body cannot go where the mind has never been. All we need to be able to do is buy time before first responders arrive to end the situation. How do you properly break a window? How do you barricade a door that swings into the hallway? Entirely possible and easy to do, but it simply requires training.

We can't stop a lawsuit from arriving after an active situation occurs. However, by having a plan in place and making training available to employees, the risk associated with a lawsuit is mitigated.

This cutting-edge, violence-saturated world that we now live in has created problems and pains that we have never had to deal with in previous generations. We must respond with cutting-edge, dynamic solutions in order to mitigate our risk associated with these problems.

These principles are life principles that every person needs to know for the rest of their lives.

The following items have been specifically designed by our company to facilitate a culture shift for your organization as you seek to address these issues.

TBG Solutions Inc. will provide:

How to Survive an Active Shooter Situation (Sessions are customizable)

Topics will include but are not limited to case studies and the lessons we can learn from past shooting situations.

- Overview of the Alert, Run, Hide, Fight principles for survival.
- Alert - Notifying your organization immediately of the situation at hand.
- Run - Your best possible chance of survival is to get out of harm's way.
- Hide - Don't just turn off the lights; learn to barricade the door as best as you can.
- Fight - If the shooter walks in then you must be prepared to disrupt his thought process and buy time. Learn simple tactics to increase your chance of survival.
- One Page Overview Handouts for Employees and their Families

Implementation

Training lasts approximately 90 minutes. It is vitally important that training be held as mandatory to ensure all employees gain the same awareness and understanding so that it is a unified effort if this nightmare situation should ever occur.

Additionally, new employee training, refresher courses, and our proactive curriculum are recommended.
